

Will of Adiel Mill 1703

PCC Canterbury prob 11/472

Adiel (sometimes written Adiell) Mill seems to have used the form of his father's will in the drawing up of his own a few years later, judging by the similarity of the wording. His Naval career was not without incident and in 1697 he was court-martialed and reprimanded¹ apparently for striking the gunner's mate. He was later employed as interpreter on Sir William Norris's expedition to Surat in India in 1701, but Norris seems to have been disappointed at his lack of ability in Persian². His brother Richard, one of the witnesses to his will, subsequently had a career as a landowner in Jamaica, and at least two sisters Joan and Ithamar outlived him, as did his mother. William Bythell referred to in the Will was probably his uncle, married to his mother's sister Elizabeth.
